Publication Information

Note to the reader: all links within this publication are to free websites. Some require a free guest account to access information.

Lincoln County Tennessee Pioneers v.28+ continues the journal of the same name published by my Mother, Jane Warren Waller, from 1970-1997. This revival is digital and freely available to anyone with a web browser. The link to each issue may be found at the TNGenWeb Lincoln website; additionally, links to free online scanned copies of all prior paper issues may be found there.

One major difference between the old paper version and the digital version (PDF) is that the digital version has many links to other resources. Links to original documents (such as an image of a death certificate) and also links to “search pages” so that family historians may perform their own searches. Additional benefits of the PDF are ease of revision; and that it may be resized on the computer screen for ease of reading. Also, there is no need for an index since document searching replaces it AND Google will index all of it. A word or phrase in blue with a line indicates a link. Please “control click” on links as they are sometimes surprising.

After some names, you will see a reference number such as LZDC-2HZ which are links to Family Search Family Tree. “Control/click” retrieves the genealogical record for Samuel Jones, an early LCT pioneer. You may be prompted to log in or create an account.

Submissions for publication are welcome. Please contact the editor for more information: <mailto:george.a.waller@gmail.com>

Dear Brother and Sister:

After so long a time I once more avail myself of the present opportunity of addressing you a few lines. First I shall try to inform you that it is my unhappy lot to acquaint you with my irrecoverable loss of my beloved companion Mary who died on the 26th of June in shouts and triumph of faith with the sweet exclamations, I am happy, I am happy, Oh doctor, doctor, who would fear death to go to Jesus. I am not afraid to die to go to Jesus. Jesus my all, to heaven has gone. I am happy, I am happy. Oh husband, when we meet in heaven, in heaven then will be no more parting. Raise the children so we may all meet in heaven. Oh God, give me fortitude, your disconsolate brother, to bear up under these dying scenes as it is His own special given will to take them unto Himself Who is seated upon the right hand of His Father in heaven. Dear sister and brother, if you would not think it murmuring against God, I would express myself unhappy, unhappy, but not at the will of God. It is my solitary way of living and seeing my dear little children fondling around me and no kind mother to instruct them, as now is the time that they should receive instructions and oh, man, man, can you instruct and raise little girls as they should be? I will say no more just now on this subject but I could fill sheets of paper on the same subject.

At present I own no land and I am very much undetermined what course I will pursue. Sometimes I am almost persuaded that I will break up housekeeping for a time at least. Then I can in imagination see scenes and scenes that perhaps might spring up from attempting to live with some other family, but I cannot think of living in this way. Run to one place and get a garment made and see a child and go another and see another - it is too trying. I cannot live in this way long. However, time will determine my way.

It has been a great while since I have written to you and a great one since I have received a letter from you. I should have written long ago if really known that you were still living in Nicholas. I was of the impression that you had moved as you did not answer my letter, but if we can renew our correspondence, the past we will lay aside and say nothing more about it. Perhaps I should say many things better there I shall not mention if Nelson were not here and can tell you many things relative to me and the children, country, &c &c if you wish to hear - my letter will be shorter than it might be.

I add a few lines relative to a deed or house which Nelson is endeavoring to obtain from the heirs - two 40 acre tracts of land which father purchased and was my understanding that it was for Nelson, though father died without making him a deed or otherwise committing to writing in any way. I received a letter from Eliza on yesterday which said something about the matters. It appears from hers that this land was intended for Nelson and that mother, herself and Mr. Wallace are willing that he shall have it at the purchase price. As to myself, I join my consent to it as you may see in the bond which he has by it being produced and stand good for that amount in a settlement or division. I want you to write to me after Nelson visits you. Give me all the news you can and the best information you all can collect or have on hand relative to our affairs and interest in any way whatever.

I did not give you the particulars of Polly's. She had a baby at seven months time. The child lived only a few minutes and she was very bad herself, though measurably recovered or was able to sit a little when she was suddenly attacked with the bowel complaint which ran unmolested for ten days at which time she expired. All the medicine that we could give her appeared to have no effect upon her during the last 36 hours of her illness. It mostly turned to vomiting. I had the child taken up and they were both buried in one grave by the side of Julia where I have almost buried my earthly happiness.

When you see Nelson and this letter, remember me your affectionate brother and know but we may all remain in peace and brotherly and sisterly love until death.

D. B. Shull

From the Gulf of Mexico
Written for the Fayetteville Observer.
LIFE IN THE CAMP.
No. 10.
Fort Barranca, April 11, 1861.

I had just finished a long letter to you, dated April 10th, when another was received to proceed to Pensacola. In my letter, I told you of the confusion of the morning, it was hot, and I have not sufficient energy to write duplicates of the "same tenor and date," especially as it would only be a detail of events which you have no doubt been apprised of long since. In fact, on board the three companies which were ordered, namely: Madison Rifles, Jackson Guards, and the Pensacola Guards, were "packed," and ready for marching, but high winds detained us until the 10th, when at 7 P. M. we left for Fort Morgan, and embarked on the steamer Katy Dale, for the Navy Yard at Pensacola. — The Navy Yard is about 35 miles from Fort Morgan, but we did not reach it until about daylight. Had a very merry time coming over, notwithstanding the general expectation that Pickens would be slain if we did not arrive, it being of us, we were not alarmed ourselves altogether.

Three hundred men could not of course be furnished with seats on the steamer, much less state-rooms, so the night was passed in singing and dancing, and each other conversing as suggested themselves, "over and over," (which technical expression means every five minutes) a charge was made on the supply of the drinking saloon, which fortunately was exhausted before any body became very gleeful, or equivalent to the Boston power. A great many of it is true displayed a strict military injunction by "showing without order," (effects of an sickness, of course,) but as a general thing the night passed pleasantly away, and morning broke on us in good spirits as if we had been comforted by Judd and had dreamed of home. It was just daylight when we were landed. The first object of attention was the much-talked of Fort Pickens, whose position from directly behind with material engines of destruction. As we stood upon the business deck and surveyed the sea, we probably of our future action, a scene of the almost impossibility of the port, and the immense cannon that must necessarily stand on stock upon it, had a tendency to some degree to take the stilling from our upper lip. — I have not heard how many guns are mounted, but from a plot at the Fort and its defenses, which was explained to me, it seems an impossibility to take it.

Having disembarked about a mile above Westington, and just within the Fort Barranca, we began to look around us for shelter. Having left our tents behind us, a few aid stations, long alone deserted, were our only quarters, which accommodated about half of the company, and the rest were left to rough it outside, with only a single blanket each to protect them from the white heat, which filled the clouds, heating in our faces like steel, back to our shoulders, and almost destructive to the blood system. After several hours we succeeded in obtaining better quarters, and again took up the line of march. About our half a mile from the beach, just outside Barranca, there is a large pine forest. In this small compass were closely situated, and we were ordered to take our positions and proceed to erect permanent quarters. Now came the tug of war. I said in a previous letter that volunteers were not required to perform manual labor. I take it all back. We all did civilians' work, which we had voluntarily adopted when off duty, in line of the house, and went to work "like soldiers." — Every man put his shoulder to the wheel, and by night all the baggage in a confused heap was tumbled upon our camp ground. This emergency prepared us for the night's rest, which we certainly appreciated, having been such a long time. With no pillow but the earth beneath me, a canteen and a pair of boots constituting my pillow, and with no covering but the length of a great old pine, I passed the first night at Barranca, untroubled by any such like dreams, proving conclusively to my mind that there's nothing like a clear conscience for a nap.

Early in the morning we began to haul plank from the wharf to erect our tents. Volunteers in proportion of 4 for a mile, were attached to the wagon, and in an expedition as possible, soon had comfortable quarters, the plan of which is something like a regular division into sections capable of holding 12 persons each, furnished with benches like those on streetcars, though not altogether as nice. The exterior of plank furnished us with tables and stools and other little "conveniences," as my friend Hallowell terms them, about the camp, and we are now getting along swimmingly. — Were it not for the rough appearance of our men, and the noisy character of the grade, we are not cognizant of existing affairs, might infer that this was some summer resort, and indeed we enjoy ourselves quite as much as if it was, because we have all the elements that comprise in such an apt. Much both moral and instrumental, (our company has an entire brass band) relieve our camp in the evening, while at other times we engage in social converse, upon general subjects, literary and otherwise, just as we would at home.

We must forego the pleasure and the refreshing influence of intellectual society, it is true, but will be the better prepared thereby to appreciate the same when we return.

Having waited up the dunes and stored them away, in the distance, (which will stand that of a country dance) up, come and I started without a prompt, to the little village of Westington, (Pensacola Navy Yard) a mile distant.

The distance proper of the place we saw close of low dunes, and we only interested in the swimming and fishing trades — one looked upon with considerable distrust by officers in command, and with perfect contempt by the soldiers, upon whom it seems they take particular pleasure in producing excursions.

The rear of the team is accepted altogether by officers of the army and navy, and presents quite a contrast; the public buildings, around it, are enclosed in gardens, beautifully laid off with walks shaded on either side by rows of live oaks, the grass is lush and green, flowers are full bloom, and every thing but the spring attire. The Government officers have their dwellings in the same section, bearing the beautiful Bay of Pensacola built in retirement, and the only object there is suggestive of elegance, good taste and ease. The yards in front of such are perfectly beautiful, bordered with neatly pruned cypresses, stands of rare flowers are arranged in good taste around the walks, and the very air is radiant with the perfume of the most delicious exotics, that bloom in profusion. Not satisfied with a passing view of such, I passed long at each, and recommended the attention, reluctant to leave a scene of such Eden-like beauty. The marked contrast with the Sahara-like appearance of Mobile port, may probably have heightened my appreciation, but I certainly never felt the influence of flowers in such a degree before, not even when presented with a like ribbon and surrounded with fragrant flowers. My feelings were truly devastated and I believe with Thackeray that with such a home, "no London, no Paris, no Venice, and the comfort of our neighbors," one need never say "an admirable situation." But I am growing tedious over flowers; pardon my weakness.

To the Editor of the Enquirer.

I have a word for the Republicans green and purple of Cincinnati and other places abroad, who were daily jabbering and ranting about the maintenance of Unionism in Dayton.

My position is in regard to this civil war, which the Lincoln Administration has inaugurated, was long since taken, in such a way, and so well understood, that I do not feel the need of repeating it. I have added nothing to it, subtracted nothing from it, and nothing about it publicly, since the war began. I know well that I am right and that in a little while "the silver thread of thought of the people" will dispense the present confusion and stirring public discourse, and will demand to know why thirty millions of people are hamstringing each other in civil war, and will answer it speedily. But, meantime, should my own words be misused, or misunderstood with intention, at least as they do, then, as a loyal native born son of Ohio, acknowledging my fault all glances to be taken, I will still be defending her to the last extremity, asking no questions. Whenever shall refuse them, or hesitate, will be a traitor and a dunderhead. And this same rule I apply to all the principal Virginia, Kentucky, or Missouri, as to any of the free States, North or West.

As to myself, as I have been made to me personally, none within my hearing, or otherwise, official or in any way, ever will be actually afraid of me, and every statement or remark in regard to me circulated publicly, as published in the Enquirer, or any other paper, is hereby told and told. And now let me add, for the benefit of the cowardly wretches of the United States, who still loudly declare that if they have any business with me, I can be found every day and at any time, either at home, on the Northern shore of Erie and London, at upon the shores of Dayton.

C. L. VALLANDIGHAM.

Our son N. H. H. — We learn from the Chatham Times that the following telegraphic correspondence has taken place between Gen. Sherman, of Ga., and Capt. Colquitt:

Memphis, April 18.
To P. H. Colquitt, Capt. Charleston Light Guard.
 Could your Company start to Norfolk, Va., by the route tomorrow night, fully equipped — at once or not at all.

JOSEPH E. BROWN.
 answers.
To Governor Brown:
 Ready! Will get back further as directed.

CAPT. COLQUITT.

The new Colquitt of New York, Mr. Brown, has received already from across the sea thousands of applications for re-enlistment positions.

≈ Pauper's Funerals

(Pauper's Funerals, Lincoln County 1860-1930)

These papers are in alphabetical order by surname. The typical claim is for the cost of a coffin for the deceased. The manufacturer/dealer of the coffins presents the claim to a Justice of Peace of Lincoln County and standard verbiage states the approximate date of death, the name of the deceased and often the location of the body. $5.00 adult coffin. $3.00 child coffin.

These old tintype photos were among the possessions of my great-grandmother, Minnie Malvina (Duckworth) (Mrs. Willis Floyd) Franklin who was born in the Petersburg-Delina area. Her parents were Samuel Marion Duckworth and Margaret (or Marguerite) Jane Hemphill. Can anyone identify the subjects?

≈ World Trees

World Trees are a collaborative effort to put all people into one tree. World trees are the future of genealogy. FamilySearch Family Tree is likely to still exist 100 years from now. That's the bright side. The downside is that collaborative means that you may enter information and later someone else disagrees and changes what you entered. The answer is trifold: we must enter convincing facts and logic; there must arbitrators to resolve disagreements (as WikiTree does); and/or we must keep our information in our own files.

Here are three World Trees:

Family Search Family Tree: Free. This is the world's largest collaborative tree with 1.38 billion persons. No arbitration. Each person has an ID: the editor's mother is: MW4S-JBW.

WikiTree Free. 29 million names. Arbitrators resolve disagreements.
The editor's great-grandfather is: Warren-3692

Geni World Family Tree Free for basic; $120/yr for Pro. 315 million names.
